

Situation Analysis

The NAIA Eligibility Center is responsible for determining the eligibility status for each student-athlete seeking to compete in an NAIA recognized sport for the first time per NAIA Bylaws Article V, Section C and CFAR Policy Article III, Section 5, Item A. The eligibility center's determination is binding for all NAIA institutions.

Once a student receives an "eligible" determination from the eligibility center, the campus faculty athletics representative (FAR) is responsible for certifying the student's eligibility to represent the institution in a given academic term. Campus certification for a first-time student-athlete is based on the eligibility center's determination and the proper application of institutional, conference and NAIA rules.

* indicates COVID-19 exception. No reapplication required for winter/spring 2020-21. FAR determines eligibility during on-campus certification.

Reapplication with the NAIA Eligibility Center

In many instances a student may be required to reapply for an NAIA Eligibility Center determination. These situations are outlined in detail below. In situations requiring reapplication, the institution is required to request reapplication on behalf of the student, the student is required to update academic and athletic experience with any new information and submit his/her PlayNAIA profile. Any new coursework must be sent via official transcripts. The eligibility center must issue a new determination of "eligible" before the student can be certified on campus.

The scenarios on the following pages describe campus responsibilities in different situations, and explain when it is necessary for students to return to the eligibility center for reapplication.
